THE FIRST COURSE ON AERIAL INSPECTION OF WIND TURBINE BLADES WAS SUCCESSFULLY COMPLETED.

Taught in Villamayor, with Municipal collaboration, he counted engineers from companies with an international operating scope.

This initiative, promoted by the USAL Science Park, based on the application of the EOL6.2 Aracnoóptero platform, developed by the Arboreal company, is a pioneer in the application of unmanned aircraft to civilian use environments as specific as the energy sector wind.

The platform, presented to the press last Monday, in an event that was attended by representatives of collaborating organizations and companies, as well as the Air Force, is the result of more than four years of research and development, in which Groups of researchers from the University of Salamanca, military technicians and leading companies in the wind sector have collaborated.

The aircraft has been tested on the world's largest wind turbine prototypes with very hard winds, showing its excellent performance.

The first promotion of the course, in which engineers from companies of international operation have participated, such as the Danish LMWindpower, Altertec, Enerpal, Comantur or CENER, has allowed to certify the first promotion of six pilot inspectors with this aircraft.

The images show some of the practices carried out inside the Villamayor sports hall and in the USAL science park.
